

Competition Economics Research Analyst (Fixed Term Contract)

Job Role:	Competition Economics Research Analyst
Job Grade:	Analyst
Location:	UK (Remote with some London office days required)

About our role

We are looking for candidates on a part time and fixed term contract basis to conduct detailed competition economics research work.

The successful candidate needs to be able to investigate new ideas using advanced competition economics and microeconomics theory and write up research findings in comprehensive reports that summarize the key findings in a simple and succinct manner, understandable to those with no background in economics.

Our ideal candidate could be a competition economist currently studying for a PHD.

We are looking for candidates who have availability of 3 months and who can work 1 day a week. The role will be based primarily from home, but with some days in our central London office required.

The day rate for the role is £175 per day subject to all normal statutory tax and national insurance deductions. There is some flexibility on the day rate according to experience.

The successful candidate will have

- A minimum of an MSc in economics with a strong interest and high grades in microeconomics and competition economics, if applicable, and will ideally be studying for PHD in competition economics
- Strong academic research skills
- The ability to write on complex issues in simple terms, understandable by those with no financial background
- Proven experience of excellent writing
- Strong analytical skills
- Some relevant work experience in a research or consulting economist capacity is desirable but not essential

About Fideres

Fideres is an economic consulting firm investigating corporate and financial wrongdoing. Fideres's investigative work has led to the uncovering of over 10 illegal cartel and price fixing cases around Europe and the US. Our clients are law firms and regulatory agencies.

We are specialised in economic analysis of competition litigation matters. Our team includes more than 20 economists based in London, Frankfurt and New York. Many hold MScs and PhDs from leading economics departments in Europe and the US.

We have developed innovative modelling techniques for highly complex competition and financial issues, and our work has contributed to a heightened standard of economic evidence in litigation globally, particularly in class action.

We are proud of our values and our diverse and international workforce, and we are committed to building a working environment where employees feel safe, welcome and able to have an open and respectful dialogue on diversity issues.

Application procedures

Please submit your curriculum vitae and a short cover letter explaining your interest in the role offered, and your ability to meet the skillset required, to careers@fideres.com. Please note that we consider a thoughtful and considered cover letter to be an integral part of your application, and we will not consider applications that do not include one.

Candidates must have the right to work in the UK.
